the subject of the highest tribute by Recorder George E. Johnson, who as a witness for the state declared: "I had a vote in this matter tonight and after making a study of the police department in the twenty years I have served as a member of the police board, I would without hesitation cast it for Captain Mayo for chief of the Atlanta police department." (Cheers from Mayo's friends came from the crowd.)

BEAVERS.
Judge Nash Broyles, now of the court of appeals, but for many years city recorder, praised Beavers, declaring him the greatest chief Atlanta had ever had, an equal of any chief in America and without a fault.

Noteworthy throughout the trial was the diligence with which counsel for the defense fought every inch of the way and sought in every way to secure the variance ground for Beavers. Chairman Paine also showed his willingness to go thoroughly into the case by admitting as evidence many facts that were contested by the board's attorneys.

Counsel for the board sprang a surprise when they refused to cross-examine any of the witnesses put up by the defense.

Mr. Key sought to inject into the trial a discussion of the action of Beavers in closing the red light district when he asked Dr. Lee Smith, former member of the police board, if Beavers had not moved the women off of the main street, this affair would never have come out. Chairman Paine cried: "Out that out, Mr. Key, we settled that matter last night when it was decided to make no reference to that question, and you were one of the first to ask for that ruling." During most of the hearing it was a good natured crowd, which comfortably filled the recorder's court room and heard the witness give their opinion of the department and of Beavers' administration. Only those materially connected with the case and a sufficient number of citizens to comfortably fill the benches were permitted inside the room and no disorder or attempts to storm the door as obtained on the previous night of the trial were evidenced.

DOUGLAS ON STAND.
Attorney Hamilton Douglas was the first witness called. In calling him, Mr.

Hopkins said he would introduce a number of witnesses to show the relation between the chief of police and the public-at-large.

Witness testified that he had been a resident of Atlanta twenty-nine years, and that some years ago he purchased certain property on King street, near the Oglethorpe apartments.

Asked what experience he had had in getting support from the police department, he answered:

"After purchasing a home on King street my family was continually bothered by disorderly conduct in a negro house near my home. I repeatedly complained to the police and finally took the matter up with the chief of police. One day I met him in Elemen Brothers' store and told him the situation."

"Beavers was discourteous as he could be. I told him of the horrible conditions in the city as a result of his administration and I told him that there that he was incompetent to handle the department, although I considered him well meaning."

"Mr. Douglas testified that after failing to get relief he had to take the law in his own hands in order to protect his family and himself."

"I went to the police station in person and had to demand a plainclothes officer to go with me, and with my pistol in my hand, I led the officer, who is Patrolman Green, into the room in this room to a negro house and we two arrested seven negroes."

"Then called the patrol wagon and had to wait at the call box with our pistols pointed at those criminals until the arrival of the wagon."

ALL SENT TO CHAINSAW.
The recorder's court I appeared to prosecute the seven, had them bound over to the city court and later had every one of them put on the chain-saw."

Mr. Douglas stated that for two years he had seen scores of negroes enter the basement of the Oglethorpe apartments to go with me, and with my drug and drinking liquors. He said he had seen as many as 75 negroes in a single night come out of the place, howling, cursing and acting in a disorderly manner. He said he again appealed to the police, but without success, and finally was forced to go to the janitor in charge and threaten to shoot him if he did not keep the negroes away."

Key asked the witness if he was satisfied with his job in capturing, with the assistance of only one officer, seven criminals, and whether or not he could complain of the police in that particular raid.

"Green would never have gotten them if I had not been there," said the witness. "There ought to have been

Come to Us For Good Fish

Come to us today—Monday—any day in the week—and get a GOOD FISH.

No matter how hot the weather, we have them every day, coming by fast express, just as fresh as you get them at the coast.

Modern methods of packing and transportation make it possible for us to give you just as good a fish in July as in January.

A Fish Diet is Better in Summer

Besides, a fish diet is better for you in the summer. It is lighter than meat and does not disturb the digestion. Then, too, it costs you much less. While meat is soaring, fish remains the same in price.

three or four more men. It was not my business to act the policeman. I had to go as a private citizen."

"Are you applying for the position of chief of police?" asked Mr. Key. "I am not," was the reply.

COMPLAINT OF DOUGLAS.
Mr. Key then asked Mr. Douglas specifically what his complaint against the department was.

"They ought to have remedied that situation long before I took the matter into my own hands and led the patrol wagon into the room," said Mr. Douglas.

"When you went to the police station you said you wanted just one man to take about that," asked Mr. Key.

"You are straining at a gnat and swallowing a camel," was the reply. "Then what are you complaining about?"

"Because I pay taxes for officers to do just such work as I was forced to do," he said.

"Then you are sore because you have to pay taxes, is that it?" asked Mr. Key.

Mr. Key asserted that Patrolman Green said he was six officers who answered the call to which Mr. Douglas replied that they did not appear until after the arrest had been made and the negroes had been lined up at the call box.

"How do you explain there was only one when Green says there were six?" asked Mr. Key.

CLEANED OUT SQUARE.
"That is a matter for you to go down to your private office and figure out for yourself. I want to say further that my neighbors said that Mr. Douglas has cleaned out that square, let us see if we can't get him to clean out ours."

A. Crutchank, proprietor of several local stores, was called on to tell his experience with the police department and his opinion of the department several times a few months ago.

He said that his store at the corner of Peachtree and Hunter streets was burglarized three times; his store at the corner of Mitchell and Whitehall was burglarized twice and his store at the corner of Peachtree and Pryor streets twice.

"Did you not take the matter up with the police department?" asked Mr. Hopkins.

"I took it up with the detective department, but got no protection," was the reply. "They sent a man down to investigate, but that was the last I ever heard of him, and that was three weeks ago."

"Did you ever recover through the detective department any of the value of the things taken from your downtown property?" asked Mr. Hopkins.

"I did not, but Officer Bullard recovered some articles that were stolen from my private residence."

"That must have been the most recent accident," observed Mr. Hopkins.

"Have you received the protection that is due a taxpayer?" asked Mr. Hopkins.

SAYS BEAVERS GOT SORE.
"No. Conditions got so bad I had to write a letter of appeal to the police board. I gave an interview to the newspapers criticizing Beavers and he got sore and called me over to his house. He wanted to know what I knew about running a police department. He told me nothing. He said he was no clear man, but he knew he could tell me something about how to run a police department. I told him I came to this country of my own free will and accounted it was immaterial what he thought about it. I conducted my cigar business."

Mr. Key asked Mr. Crutchank if it was not true that some burglars were caught some time ago and that since that time his stores had not been entered. He replied in the affirmative and was further asked if a man used to be from one of the burglars was not the same kind used in entering one of his stores. He said he could not say positively that it was the same thief.

"You don't expect a department with only 267 men to station a watchman at every business house in the city," asked Mr. Key.

"No, I do not," replied the witness, "but I will say that with a 100-man patrol light in my glass store window and with other lights all around the place I don't see how a burglary could occur in a well policed city."

ON BOARD.
On the stand Recorder Johnson testified that before going on the bench nearly two years ago he had seen twenty years of service as a member of the police board.

"You have had ample time to study the needs of the departments, the merits of the officers in charge, and the operation of its branches, have you not?" asked Mr. Hopkins.

"Yes," was the reply.

Judge Johnson said that both sides had called on him to testify in the case.

In reply to the question by Mr. Hopkins as to whether or not his opinion he thought the present department was sufficiently efficient as could be the public safety, Judge Johnson said: "It is just about as good as it gets with the number of men they have."

"Do you know whether or not the detective department and the uniform men are working in co-operation?" he was asked by Mr. Hopkins.

"The most honest they do," he replied. "There is a need for fifty more good plainclothesmen and with four or five more automobiles they could catch all the burglars that would dare infect these parts."

The whole department ought to be reorganized and put on an entirely different basis. The public is entitled to protection and, according to the amount of taxes they are paying, they ought to have the best department in the country.

FOUR SHIFTS.
"In the fifth ward four men have to do all the patrolling. There ought to be four shifts instead of three, and there ought to be 80 men in the fourth shift, with its captain and sergeant."

in charge. They could attire themselves as tramps if necessary and should patrol the city when the regular men are going off duty, for the regulars all gather in near the center of town nearly midnight, leaving a good portion of the town without protection until the other shift goes on duty.

Further outlining his plans for reorganizing the department, Judge Johnson declared that the detectives department should be increased to 80 men and that they should be stationed at the city hall and called the Atlanta secret service department.

"As the situation exists now, does it insure efficient police protection?" asked Mr. Hopkins.

"I can't answer that question. I will say, however, that we need a man of ability at the head of the department and should pay him at least $3,000 per year," said Judge Johnson.

"You would not leave the man at the head now on the job, would you?" asked Mr. Hopkins.

"When I quit the police board and became recorder, I made up my mind not to dabble in the board's politics and I won't butt in," was the reply.

When asked Judge Johnson if he did not think that Beavers was a most efficient chief?

"I think he has done the best he knows how," answered Judge Johnson.

"Is he competent?" asked Mr. Westmoreland.

"I think he is about as competent as any we have ever had," said Judge Johnson.

NEEDS TO BE REORGANIZED.

"It is not true that the great trouble with the department is the system and not the personnel," asked Mr. Westmoreland.

"Yes, it needs to be reorganized and placed under an entirely new system," was the reply.

"After visiting many cities and inspecting the police department did you not find Atlanta's department to be among the best?" asked Mr. Westmoreland.

"We have some excellent officers in the department, and I can go further by saying that we have a better department than Birmingham or Macon," replied the judge.

"Since being recorder have you been reason to lay any blame for conditions at the feet of Beavers?" asked Mr. Westmoreland.

"I can't answer that question, but I can say that the executive officer created that which had been in his control," said Judge Johnson.

"Judge Johnson said that the chief could not get results unless he worked in harmony with the board," said Judge Johnson.

"Unless he worked with the board it would mean his ruin. Just how I feel about it after many years of study, stated to say that as far as Chief Beavers is concerned, I believe he has tried to do his duty as he saw fit, but my first choice for head of the department is Captain Mayo. I supported him over Beavers when I was on the board, but I lost," said Judge Johnson.

Asked by Mr. Westmoreland if it was a true statement that Judge Johnson stated that there had always been trouble with the police board, Judge Johnson replied that he had never been troubled by the police board, but that he had been troubled by the chief. "If the board is not consulted the members get sore," he said.

"For nine years I was in the minority on the board and I lost," said Judge Johnson.

"The board is not consulted the members get sore," said Judge Johnson.

POLITICS ELIMINATED.

"No, no, all politics have been eliminated," said Judge Johnson.

"I have no objection to the board not consulting the board, but I think the members into his confidence in his opinion," said Judge Johnson.

"The board is not consulted the members get sore," said Judge Johnson.

vers before getting a conference to report emergency matters.

GENERAL FRICTION.

Detective Hans Rosser, of the detective department, testified that there was general friction in the police department, but that the men complained of Beavers had used poor judgment in sending men on call.

On examination he said that with eight others he was sent to raid a house and capture a man and one who while two men were being shot in another part of the city.

Judge Nash Broyles testified that he believed Chief Beavers to be the best chief the department had ever had, that he was efficient in every way and that he was honored as such, not only in the department but in the city.

Colonel Orville H. Hall, B. Lee Smith, Joseph A. Moore, Hugh Dwyer, Thomas H. Jeffries, Robert A. Broyles and C. R. Barker, former police board members, testified that they considered Beavers efficient, capable and doing the best he could without the active support of the board.

COMPETENT, SAYS MAYSON.

City Attorney James L. Mayson was the next witness to take the stand in behalf of Police Chief Beavers. "Chief Beavers is competent and efficient in every respect," he said. "I could say nothing against him in the fulfillment of his official duties. He is a well-known man in the city and is highly respected."

Dr. W. L. Gilbert, a well-known physician, testified that he believed Beavers to be competent and efficient. He said that he had known Beavers for many years and that he had never seen him do anything that would reflect credit on him.
